City council honors Jim Graham for community garden growth

The garden has been renamed the Jim Graham Community Garden

RADFORD – For more than a decade, Jim Graham has nurtured and expanded the Radford Community Garden, offering a place for gardeners not only to grow food but also grow friendships and fellowship.

Radford City Council recently honored Graham for coming up with the idea for the garden in 2010 and overseeing its development ever since.

“The Radford Community Garden began in 2010 at what is now the New River sports complex with 10 plots, and initially there were a limited number of 20-by-20 [foot]plots, but over time the garden has grown to have over 40 plots ranging in sizes,” the council resolution reads. “The garden moved locations to Pulaski Avenue in 2013 and is now contained in a fenced in area with a combination lock given to all gardeners.”

“Jim Graham has served as the Community Garden Coordinator for years and invested time and effort to ensuring the success of the Radford Community Garden; and the atmosphere and success of the Community Garden can be attributed to Jim,” it continues. “The garden has been a great place to meet like-minded citizens, make new friends, raise healthy vegetables and be outside along the New River. The Community Garden is truly a community where gardeners share a wheelbarrow and hand plow, as well as tips and tricks of the trade when gardening, and Jim Graham has been the face of the Radford Community Garden, promoting and growing the garden over the last 13 years.”

In an interview in 2019 celebrating the tenth growing season of the garden, Graham talked about what the garden has meant to him.

“I have a great feeling of accomplishment that I was able to organize and create a place for citizens to enjoy healthy outdoor exercise and at the same time raise healthy organic food,” said Graham. “I have been amazed at the interest in the garden by the citizens. It has been a labor of love, as I’ve been a gardener since I was a teenager.”

The Radford City Council resolution encourages the community to recognize Graham’s accomplishments and names the garden in his honor.

“Now, therefore, be it resolved by the Council of the City of Radford, Virginia that Jim Graham is recognized for his role in the success and growth of the Radford Community Garden and hereby names the Radford Community Garden the Jim Graham Community Garden and encourages all citizens to support and recognize the contributions Jim Graham has provided to the City and its gardeners,” it reads.

Administration exodus continues for Radford City Public Schools

Interim superintendent has been named to begin July 1

RADFORD – Radford High School Principal Tara Grant is leaving Radford City Public Schools for a new position with Pulaski County Public Schools, following Superintendent Robert Graham across the bridge to the home of the Cougars.

Belle Heth Principal Kelly Linkenhoker also recently left the school division, taking a position with Salem City Public Schools as the Principal of Salem High School after serving for two years as principal of Belle Heth Elementary School.

Graham resigned as RCPS Superintendent on June 9 after eight years leading the division and was shortly thereafter named Superintendent of PCPS. Grant has now been named the new Assistant Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction for PCPS. Grant spent two years as principal of Radford High School, four years as principal of Belle Heth Elementary, and a year as the division’s Director of Testing.

On Tuesday, the Radford City School Board named Dr. Roger Collins as interim superintendent to lead RCPS while the superintendent’s search takes place. Collins began his educational career in 1983 as a classroom teacher, then served as an assistant principal, principal, assistant superintendent and, from 2003 – 2014 as Superintendent of Nelson County Public Schools. Following that position, he has served as an associate professor in the graduate Educational Leadership

NRV Agency on Aging continues commitment to seniors in new Pulaski location

Lori Graham
Contributing writer

The New River Valley (NRV) Agency on Aging is continuing the same dedication and support to our aging population from a new location in Pulaski.

The organization, formed in 1975, was previously located in the town of Pulaski but had moved to Fairlawn. Now, they are just a few doors down from their original location at 44 3rd Street NW, Pulaski, near the library and across from court services. However, counselors are often out in the New River Valley meeting with people at a location more accessible to them, Executive Director Tina King said.

“We want to meet the needs or find the resources that a person is looking for. We don’t want people to keep searching for answers. We may not always have ‘the answer’ but we will get them the best answers available,” King said.

Aging in place has become a common phrase when considering seniors in need of care and support within their communities. According to the agency’s website, “almost 90% of older adults want and expect to age in place, staying in their homes and communities through their later years.”

With this expectation comes an array of considerations and planning for care such as accessibility in the home, nutrition, medical support and supplies, and financial management and education.

“Most people want to stay within the communities and homes they are familiar with,” said King. “For some folks, their home does not have accessibility for them, so thinking ahead of what might make it accessible, and when they might not

When it comes to summer fire safety, it's all about location, location, location

With the summer season in full swing, fire and water damage cleanup specialists with SERVPRO in the Christiansburg area remind homeowners that popular summer activities - like grilling, setting off fireworks, and relaxing around a fire pit or campfire - can quickly turn from fun to flames, resulting in damage to property and structures, and even personal injury.

"Where you place your grill and fire pit matters," says Rick Isaacson, CEO of Servpro Industries, LLC. "If you don't pay close attention to the location and environment, it could cause much more serious problems than just property damage. Even if the location of your grill or fire pit hasn't changed from past years, the setting may have changed and created a more dangerous situation with the addition of fallen branches, leaves or more combustible, aging decking materials."

To help avoid a potential fire disaster, you need to control the three factors that allow a fire to start and grow: fuel, heat, and air. When you do build an intentional fire, for cooking, warmth, or simple enjoyment, a key element to control is fuel. The U.S. Fire

Administration, a division of FEMA, offers these guidelines to help keep your summer fire activities under control.

Grills. Place your grill well away from siding and deck railings and out from under eaves and overhanging branches. Do not store or use a grill on a porch or balcony. Use propane, charcoal and wood pellet barbecue grills outdoors only to avoid the risk of fire or carbon monoxide poisoning.

Chimineas, outdoor fireplaces, and fire pits. Use these items outdoors only and position them at least 10 feet away from your home or anything that can burn. Build campfires at least 25 feet away from homes, tents, shrubs and anything that can burn. Flying embers can start fires that are not in direct contact with flames.

Fireworks. If you want to see fireworks, consider going to a public show put on by experts. Even the simplest fireworks like "sparklers" can reach 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit and cause third-degree burns.

"A small spark can start a major fire," says Isaacson. "Leave the fireworks to the professionals and put some time and thought into where you set up your grill, chiminea and fire pit, including clearing away any combustible materials. Then spend your summer enjoying good times and great food, not dealing with the destruction and heartbreak of a house fire."

be able to drive, what transportation is available for them."

NRV Agency on Aging provides a free downloadable workbook, along with additional online information, for anyone seeking resources as they prepare for aging in place. An Aging in Place workbook, used in one-to-one meetings with the agency or volunteers as well as in group presentations, can be found at <https://www.nrvaoa.org/>.

Printed copies can be made available as well by calling the NRV Agency on Aging office at (540) 980-7724. A small fee of less than $15 will cover the cost of printing and mailing the book.

The agency also continues to seek partnerships with other community-based organizations. Older adults may be in a situation of raising grandchildren or great-grandchildren and find the need for resources outside the typical scope of senior support programs.

NRV Agency on Aging is considered a governmental cooperative, so each of the region's governmental groups appoint board members to help meet the needs of the agency. They each provide some annual funding as well as supporting the agency in other ways, such as with the new space they recently moved into in April of this year.

The Older Americans Act of 1965 provides federal dollars that also helps in supporting some of the agency's programs that benefit the New River Valley. State funding from Virginia through the General Assembly, grant funding, and donations are also extremely helpful in meeting the resources necessary to provide larger programs for the area. The agency's budget is large, and the needs are ever increasing, King said.

"Over the past year, from October to September, we have provided direct services to about 1,200 people, but some receive multiple services" King said. "On a daily basis, we are serving approximately 375 meals throughout the New River Valley, to their homes. Before covid, we served a little over 200 a day."

The agency has also received special grant funding to help with rising costs of food and other costs that provide meals to homebound seniors, which could not have been done without the extra support.

Seniors' needs are more complex too as there are more than just basic needs for nutrition that need to be met. The agency provides opportunities for social gatherings such as Friendship Café that meets in different locations throughout the New River Valley, 2-3 days a week. Additionally, many seniors and their families have questions about health insurance and Medicare coverage that agency staff and volunteers can answer. Interested individuals with questions can utilize electronic meetups with the agency's workers, meet in person, or speak with someone over the phone about other options to have assistance in completing insurance forms.

Besides the meals program delivered to seniors in their homes, another program strives to meet the in-between times when older adults may find themselves low on food supplies. Staples for Seniors, similar to the backpack program for school-age children, is designed to fill the gap over the weekends with non-perishable food such as peanut butter and tuna.

Fido's Pantry is also an extremely helpful program that feeds the pets of people already receiving home-delivered meals.

"While there are many care needs and things that we as a community need to do to meet those needs, it is important to realize the value that older adults bring to our community. They built our community. They are the ones that have put in the blood, sweat and tears to get our communities to what they are now. They bring so much richness to our community" King said. "Advanced planning is really a gift to those in the caregiving position."

New River Valley Agency on Aging provides many resources in addition to those mentioned here. Staff members and volunteers encourage those in the community with questions to reach out to them over the phone, in person, or on their website. Donations are also accepted and help to continue providing information and support to our community's aging community.

Celebrate the work of Virginia pollinators during National Pollinator Week

Pollinator species such as honeybees, bumble bees, butterflies, and other insects are an essential component in the production of much of our food supply. The Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services (VDACS) encourages all Virginians to join in celebrating National Pollinator Week, June 19 – 25, by helping to attract, protect and increase the state's pollinator species.

Pollination occurs when insects, animals, wind, or water transfer pollen from the anther of one plant or flower to the stigma of another in the process of fertilization. In most plants, pollination is necessary for the plant to produce seeds. Pollination that occurs from contact with insects and animals, results in a higher yield of fruit for some plants, such as strawberry, cucumber, apple, tomato, squash, or watermelon plants.

"Over the past few years, bee populations, as well as the populations of other pollinators such as birds, butterflies, bats and beetles, have declined dramatically," said Keith Tignor, State Apiarist, Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services. "I encourage every Virginian to take steps to help attract, protect and increase the state's pollinator species."

The following are a few suggestions to help attract, protect and increase the populations of pollinators in Virginia:

Support your local beekeeper by buying local honey.

Plant flowers in a variety of colors and shapes to attract pollinators to your garden, window box or hanging basket. Go to pollinator.org/guides and enter your zip code for an area-specific guide and a great aid to get started.

Set up a pollinator refreshment station in your garden. Add water in a shallow bowl or pie tin with rocks or marbles for bees to stand.

Learn more about how to interact with bees.

Become a beekeeper by setting up your own hive. State Apiarist Tignor, Virginia Cooperative Extension or a local beekeeping association are great resources for more information.

For additional information, contact the Virginia State Apiarist at 804.786.3515 or at keith.tignor@vdacs.virginia.gov.

Throughout his nearly 50 years in business, he has provided employment and mentoring for many barbers and stylists. At 90-years-old, Mr. Johnson still serves the community at his shop, as well as making house calls for those who are sick or unable to find transportation to his shop.

Club member Paul Farrier said, "If you are interested in an excellent haircut and a local history lesson, make an appointment!"

Prior to opening his own shop in 1974, Mr. Johnson worked in the Virginia Tech barbershop, cutting hair for the Corps of Cadets. He was told that he could only cut African American students' hair before or after hours. At the end of one school year, Mr. Johnson grew tired of these rules and told the students to come in during regular hours. He was reported to his supervisor, who ultimately did not speak to Mr. Johnson about the incident and the barbershop remained integrated. During this time, Mr. Johnson provided support and counseling as well for African American students who didn't feel especially welcome in downtown Blacksburg.

Former Blacksburg Police Chief Bill Brown recalled that when he was young, Mr. Johnson started a Boy Scout troop in the African American community of Wake Forest. All of the troop members, Chief Brown included, looked up to Mr. Johnson as a respected role model.

"Our meetings were fun and he instilled the following: character, integrity, respect, perseverance, and survival skill. His efforts reinforced what our parents were teaching us at home. Mr. Johnson certainly served as an example by exhibiting each of the aforementioned traits constantly."

"Mr. Johnson is just a special individual, because he is a thoughtful, humble, exceptional, caring, and lovable kind of guy," Brown continued. "All throughout his life, he has, and continues to, epitomize what all of those words represent and has truly set a high standard."

Tom Sherman, Vice President of the Blacksburg Museum and Cultural Foundation, spoke of Mr. Johnson's deep knowledge of local history and his willingness to share his experiences with growing up under segregation and the integration process in Montgomery County. When the Town of Blacksburg decided to create a museum, Mr. Johnson was a respected member of that conversation, making the case that there were other aspects of the Town's history that couldn't be told well within the Alexander Black House. When the St. Luke and Odd Fellows Hall became part of the Blacksburg Museum to tell the story of New Town and the African American residents of Blacksburg, Mr. Johnson was an integral part of the Committee to be sure the story was properly told. Sherman said,

"Mr. Johnson is a model of the resilience, pride, self-reliance, and community spirit of the people who decided to build that building," said Sherman.

Johnson is, or has been, an active member of many groups in the New River Valley including the First Baptist Church Radford, Virginia Barber and Cosmetologist Apprenticeship and Training Program, Christiansburg Institute Alumni Association, NAACP, American Legion, Montgomery County Human Relations Council, Town of Blacksburg Cemetery Committee, Warm Hearth Inc. Board of Directors, Town of Blacksburg Museum Committee, and Blacksburg Sports Club.

Upon receiving the Professional Leadership Award, Johnson said with characteristic humor, "Listening to you all, I wonder how I did it. Sometimes

I went to meetings seven days a week."

And it is clear that he will continue to do all he can for his community as long as he is able.

The Rotary Club of Christiansburg-Blacksburg is celebrating 100 years of "Service Above Self" in 2023. The Club's bi-annual blood screening (returning on July 15), local leadership recognition, youth development programs, and community service projects as well as sponsorship of the Virginia Tech Rotaract Club and participation in Rotary International programs such as PolioPlus exemplify this motto. WORSHIP DIRECTORY

I Need Help

Read Psalms 11:1 through 18:50

Many of the Psalms are full of praise to God. We sometimes visualize David as peacefully strumming a harp as he quietly watches a flock of sheep grazing on a grassy slope. Psalm 13 presents a different picture.

David apparently had doubts, troubling thoughts, and enemies. Things did not always go well for him. In the first part of this psalm, David, in authentic transparency, expressed some real concerns. He apparently had enemies who were getting a little too close for comfort. The amazing part is how, in spite of the chaos around him, David made a decision to trust God.

But I trust in your unfailing love; my heart rejoices in your salvation (Psalm 13:5).

Everything does not always go well for us either. We face challenges that seem overwhelming, and we do not always see a clear path through the jungle of everyday life. But God is our Source of help, and we can trust Him to get us through!

Prayer Suggestion: Father, I do not feel up to the task that is before me at times, but I have decided that I will trust You.

Quicklook: Psalm 13:1-6

Virginia vaccination project named national 'immunization champion'

With funding from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) through the Extension Foundation, Virginia Cooperative Extension collaborated with experts from the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine's Department of Population Health Sciences and Virginia State University to get more shots in arms.

Virginia Cooperative Extension was recognized by the National Adult and Influenza Immunization Summit, which named the organization an "Immunization Neighborhood" Immunization Champion. The summit, which addresses and resolves adult and influenza immunization issues, is made up of over 700 partners across the United States. Extension was chosen from 25 nominations for the national award.

"The ultimate goal of this work is to get more people vaccinated," said Kathy Hosig, who spearheaded the project. "CDC worked with Cooperative Extension across the country through Extension Foundation because we have presence in all the communities and we know the communities."

Hosig is an associate professor, the director of the Center for Public Health Practice and Research at the veterinary college, and a public health Extension specialist.

As the front door to the land-grant mission at Virginia Tech, Extension is how research is put into action and shared with the commonwealth's communities.

"We have Extension agents who work with family and consumer sciences, working with families, financial management, and healthy living," Hosig said. "These are the agents we are working with through this project."

Through Extension, Hosig has worked on public health problems such as diabetes management, prevention of obesity, and substance misuse and addiction.

The hands-on immunization project focused on areas in the state with the lowest vaccination rates, getting the word out about COVID vaccination through Extension agents and faculty. Outreach has ranged from vaccine clinics to education booths to opportunities for residents.

The ultimate goal is to increase adult vaccination as a whole. Several vaccines, such as the shingles vaccine, are given exclusively to adults, and adults need boosters for some vaccines they received as children.

In addition to Hosig, the Extension team includes:

Sophie Wenzel, an assistant professor of practice in the Department of Population Health Sciences and associate director of the Center for Public Health Practice and Research

Kristina Jiles, a research assistant professor in the Department of Population Health Sciences and public health Extension specialist

Amanda Hensley, a graduate research assistant in the Department of Population Health Sciences

Domenique Villani, a graduate research assistant in the Department of Population Health Sciences

Natalie Martin, a graduate research assistant in the Department of Population Health Sciences

Karen Munden, a family and consumer sciences Extension agent and state program leader for health for Extension

Brad Jarvis, agriculture and natural resources Extension agent for Extension

Tiffany Freer, health specialist for Extension at Virginia State University

Jordan Everett, health extension associate for Extension at Virginia State University

While accepting the award at the National Adult and Influenza Immunization Summit, Hosig participated in a panel discussion explaining Extension's work.

"Winning this award has been able to add value to the relationships with our state department of health and with our funder, CDC. It's going to be great for Extension as well — all of this work over the past three years has given us visibility on a national scale," said Hosig.

Virginia Cooperative Extension recently received two more years of funding. Wenzel will lead that project, and the team that spans Extension, the veterinary college, and Virginia State University will apply what they've learned and increase their efforts to increase adult vaccination and improve the health of Virginia's local communities.

Warm Hearth Village Director of Fitness receives statewide Power of Purpose Award

BLACKSBURG – Kenny Harrah, Director of Fitness since 2016, has been named the LeadingAge Virginia Power of Purpose Award recipient for 2023.

LeadingAge Virginia is the state and national trade organization for nonprofit retirement communities. It works with members to create innovative practices that transform services for the aging in America and plays an active role in representing those organizations to legislators in seeking reform of policies related to health care. WHV has been an active member of LeadingAge since 1981.

Each year LeadingAge honors outstanding leaders in the industry with these key awards: Vision, Emerging Leader, Advocacy, and Power of Purpose. The Power of Purpose Award recognizes one person who leads the way in providing outstanding commitment to the residents within their role in the community, leads with or exhibits a person-centered approach of compassion to individuals they serve, shows specific actions that enhance and enrich the lives of residents and goes beyond the role consistently representing the community's mission, vision and values.

Harrah is instrumental in lifting people up, keeping them active, and reminding them they are important members of our community who continue to have ideas and contributions to make. He works hard to champion and implement them. Warm Hearth's outdoor Pickleball court and Rock Steady Boxing for those with Parkinson's Disease began as wishes and ideas from our residents and are now realities in part due to Kenny's commitment to our residents and his support of their contributions to our community. The Warm Hearth vision is to nurture a transformative culture where people live and work in community, knowing their contributions are essential to our success. Kenny exemplifies this vision and enriches the lives of our residents every day.

"I'm proud of my team and the work we do every day, here in Fitness," Harrah said. "None of this would have been possible without the help of my team, our President & CEO, the Director of Marketing and Development, and my fellow coworkers. I'm humbled by this recognition and honored to work with these impressive individuals and residents at WHV," he added.

William Lester, President & CEO, congratulated Harrah and said, "I am so proud of Kenny and how we all work together to be sure our residents, and each other, are living their best life possible."

Big South seeking new home for tourney

The Big South Conference still has no new home for its men's and women's basketball tourneys, but Monday the conference announced it will award its 2024 Basketball Championship via bids from on-campus and/or community partners.

According to the conference office, the Big South Council of Chief Executive Officers approved this decision on Friday, June 16, and Request for Proposals will be distributed to the Conference membership the week of June 26. The league anticipates awarding the host site no later than Sept. 1.

The 2024 Championships will mark the third consecutive year with a combined men's and women's tournament format and is tentatively scheduled for March 6-10. While it was initially determined that a one-year format of home sites/highest seeds for both men's and women's basketball would be utilized in 2024 if a neutral site could not be secured by June 13, the Big South CEOs supported the Council of Athletics Directors proposal to explore an on-campus pre-determined site, and/or a member school hosting in its home community for this upcoming year.

"Our membership spent a considerable amount of time focusing on this pertinent matter," said Big South Commissioner Sherika A. Montgomery. "We were able to glean feedback from constituency groups including our student-athletes, coaches and administrators. In doing so, it became clear a pre-determined location would be optimal in providing a supreme and holistic championship experience for men's and women's basketball student-athletes."

Bids will be accepted through Aug. 4 at which time the Conference will begin evaluating proposals with a selection determined by the final week of August. At the same time, the Big South is continuing its exploration for a single neutral site location for 2025 and beyond.

"Throughout our membership, we have immensely vibrant and supportive communities, superb facilities with top-notch amenities, and enthusiastic campus support that will aid in forging meaningful and impactful partnerships," added Montgomery. "In addition, this will allow for advance fan engagement, promotion and community outreach efforts that will continue the previous two years of growing and celebrating our men's and women's basketball programs competing together for bids to the NCAA Tournament."

Andrew Green and his wife, Jennifer, took time for a selfie following the 2023 PGA championship at Oak Hill Country Club. Green oversaw the restoration of the course and has built a thriving career in golf course design.

Hokie part of golf course design

Growing up on a farm in a rural county that, at one time, lacked a single stoplight generally gives one a healthy respect for natural resources.

Andrew Green is no exception.

With a job that takes him around the country, Green admires a beautiful piece of property and all it offers. Then, perhaps out of habit, he starts envisioning fairway contours, plotting bunker placements, mapping out green locations, and implementing hazards in a way to create memorable experiences for golfers of all skill levels.

Green '01 ranks as one of the world's top golf course architects, specializing in renovations of existing courses. He uses tools such as specialized software applications and drone footage to craft 18 holes of wonderfulness, but unlike many course designers, he occasionally hops on a Caterpillar D6 bulldozer and brings his vision to life.

"I love to play in the dirt," Green admitted in a recent phone interview. "I'm a big kid. There's more to it [course renovations] than just that, but certainly it's great therapy to get in the bulldozer and create the vision."

Green's ability to see a golf course for what it can be and not what it currently is led to one of his greatest career accomplishments. In 2016, Green and his company were chosen to renovate the East Course at Oak Hill Country Club in Rochester, New York, in preparation for this past May's 2023 PGA Championship, one of professional golf's four major tournaments.

Green possessed extensive course design and project experience, and in 2014, he struck out on his own and started his own company, Green Golf and Turf. He took meetings with clubs and courses throughout the mid-Atlantic and northeast, worked on projects of all scales, and started to earn his reputation as a restoration expert. In 2016, he made his pitch to the Oak Hill Country Club leadership, gently proposing renovations that would reflect the course's glory days.

A humble approach befitting of his rural Botetourt County roots – he grew up in Daleville, an hour north of Virginia Tech's campus – and his love of golf history led to the leadership at Oak Hill taking a chance on him.

"I kind of approached it [his pitch for the job] differently than maybe some other individuals," Green said. "I certainly didn't approach it with a lot of ego. I try to do that everywhere I work. I approach it asking, 'What's the best thing for the project? What's the best thing for the golf course? What respects the past and pushes them toward the future?'"

In meeting with the leadership at Oak Hill, Green's vision connected the course's past to its future. His presentation referenced the legacy of Donald Ross, Oak Hill's original architect who designed the course in the 1920s. Green studied the original layouts and drawings of the acclaimed architect to inspire his renovation plan.

"That seemed to resonate with that group," Green said. "By being different, I stood out. It took them really a leap of faith to trust me that I could do it."

Fall 2019 marked the tee time for the Oak Hill project, and Green's company spent approximately four months renovating the course – a gorgeous layout originally designed by Ross. In mid-May at the 2023 PGA Championship, Green's work led to him earning unanticipated global recognition.

Those in charge at Oak Hill spoke glowingly of his efforts. He received positive attention from media outlets and numerous fans even asked for his autograph, which, in his words, was "a little mind-blowing."

More importantly, though, the players told Green that he had aced his project.

"Everything I've heard has been very positive," Green said. "I don't know if, after a little reflection, there have been additional conversations, but for everything that I've heard, it had been received really well."

"All the members were just so proud of what their club has become again. Being on the world stage in such a good light certainly was great to see for them."

Green credits much of the success in his current profession to what he learned in Southwest Virginia, first as a teenage cart boy and maintenance worker at Botetourt Country Club and later as an undergraduate at Virginia Tech. Green was a good golfer in high school, but admittedly not good enough to earn a scholarship, so he pursued what he considered the next best thing – course architecture.

Dean Bork, an associate professor in architecture at the time, cautioned Green of the pitfalls of that career. Bork, who is now retired, brought credibility to the conversation – he worked in the industry before becoming a professor at Virginia Tech. But Green remained undaunted, graduating with a degree in landscape architecture, a five-year program in what is now the College of Architecture, Arts, and Design, and earned a second degree, this one in crop soils and environmental science – turfgrass option – in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences.

"I told him what the likely consequences of pursuing it might be, and he was determined," Bork said. "That's what he wanted to do, and from all sides, he's really made a good show of it."

"I do know that to be successful in the golf business, you have to be capable of networking with the right people. I think Andrew was acquainted with a few PGA Tour professionals when he was still a student ... and those kinds of connections helped propel his career forward because it's really tough to get those kinds of clients without the right network of contacts."

Green's brother, Sam, helped him start that network. Sam Green '94 worked as a golf course superintendent for several years, including a stint at Congressional Country Club in Bethesda, Maryland, the site of the 1997 U.S. Open. At that event, Sam helped his brother secure a volunteer spot assisting with course preparation, thus introducing him

Bobcats on all-state soccer squad

Three Radford High School soccer players have been named to the All-State Class 2 boys' team announced on Monday.

They include Enzo Pugliese, Evan Rupe and Eli Goff. Teammate Brody Shull was named to the second team.

This comes on the heels of all four Bobcats being named to the first team Three Rivers District and All-Region C list.

Radford finished with 14-4-1 record this past season, scoring 81 goals and had 18 goals against. Two of their losses came against state finalist Glenvar.

Rupe scored 34 goals and had eight assists this season. Goff added three goals and Pugliese had two. Schull finished with 16 goals and 11 assists.

In addition, Parker Prioleau, Devon Murphy and Charlie Davis were named to the TRD first-team, while Elijah Kelly and Colin Vice were second teamers.

Kelly and Prioleau were named second team all-region.

to the professional golf world. Andrew Green eventually worked for McDonald & Sons, a company that builds golf courses, for 14 years, learning every aspect of the business before striking out on his own. A job renovating the bunkers at Country Club of York in York, Pennsylvania, helped him break through in the profession.

Throughout his career, Green has been involved in the restoration or renovation of several famous courses, including Inverness Club in Ohio; the Blue Course at Congressional Country Club, Scioto Country Club in Ohio; Whitemarsh Valley Country Club in Pennsylvania; Indian Creek Country Club in Miami; and of course, Oak Hill.

During all those projects and others, Green found himself reflecting on Virginia Tech's impact on him.

"Every step of the way, Virginia Tech helped me," Green said. "There's a level of pride and perseverance that you have from being in Blacksburg. It's that grassroots or blue-collar mentality. It is certainly with the football team, right? Coach [Frank] Beamer and coach [Bud] Foster built that mentality that we're going to get up and go to work every day and we're going to overachieve. We're going to be great by working together. Those things certainly resonated.

"Within the landscape architecture program, I was very laser focused on wanting to do this, but they helped show me the value of all the other things within that discipline that have benefited me in so many ways that I didn't even realize at the time. ... Then in the turfgrass department, the relationships I've built, the hard work and camaraderie in that side of the world, was phenomenal."

Green's success at Oak Hill has given him the honors for other projects. He and his team just started work at Interlachen Country Club in Minnesota – the site of the 1930 U.S. Open won by legendary golfer and seven-time major champion winner Bobby Jones. Later this fall, he will be overseeing the renovation of East Lake Golf Club in Atlanta, Jones' home course.

Green is excited to tee off on those and others, though they may slice into time reserved for wife, Jennifer '00, and three children. His listing of projects stretches to 2026-27 – an accomplishment in a profession prone to volatility.

Jimmy Robertson for Virginia Tech

Schedule set for 2023 Radford University Men's Soccer

RADFORD - Radford Head Men's Soccer Coach Chris Barrett revealed the full schedule for the Fall 2023 season on Tuesday afternoon.

The campaign will feature a trio of exhibition matches, a stacked non-conference slate and an exciting Big South Conference gauntlet.

The 2023 edition of the Highlanders will take the field together for the very first time when they welcome the West Virginia Mountaineers for an exhibition on Aug. 15. The squad then heads to UNCG for a second exhibition on Aug. 18 before wrapping up the preseason with one final exhibition on Aug. 22 at Roanoke College.

Radford's regular season arrives on Aug.

25 when it travels to N.C. State and then the highly anticipated home opener will be played against Mount St. Mary's on Aug. 29.

Three straight matches inside Cupp Stadium against Commonwealth foes usher in the month of September. James Madison (Sept. 1), George Mason (Sept. 5) and Old Dominion (Sept. 8) will also make their way to the New River Valley.

Coach Barrett and the Highlanders then hit the road for a four-game trip that includes East Tennessee State (Sept. 12), Wofford (Sept. 16), VMI (Sept. 19) and Queens (Sept. 27).

Big South play kicks off with a home match against High Point on Oct. 2 and alternates home-and-away from there on out. Radford will host USC Upstate (Oct. 11), Longwood on Homecoming weekend (Oct. 21) and Gardner-Webb (Oct. 28) while playing away at Winthrop (Oct. 7), UNC Asheville (Oct. 14) and Presbyterian (Nov. 1).
